Ayutthaya, the former capital of Thailand, is a city steeped in history and architectural wonders. As a UNESCO World Heritage Site, it boasts an array of ancient temples, palaces, and gardens that offer a glimpse into Thailand's rich past.

If you're planning a visit to Ayutthaya, be sure to include these 20 must-see attractions on your itinerary:

1. Wat Phra Sri Sanphet

Wat Phra Sri Sanphet was the royal temple of the Ayutthaya Kingdom. Built in the 15th century, it was once the grandest and most important temple in the kingdom. Today, its ruins are a testament to the splendor of the Ayutthaya era.

2. Wat Chaiwatthanaram

Wat Chaiwatthanaram is another must-see temple in Ayutthaya. Its unique Khmer-inspired architecture sets it apart from other temples in the area. Built in the 17th century, it was once a royal temple and a center of learning.

3. Wat Yai Chai Mongkhon

Wat Yai Chai Mongkhon is known for its towering prang, which is the tallest in Ayutthaya. Built in the 14th century, it was once the royal temple of King U Thong. Today, it is a popular tourist destination and a place of pilgrimage.

4. Wat Phra Ram

Wat Phra Ram is a beautiful temple located on the banks of the Chao Phraya River. Built in the 14th century, it was once a royal temple and a center of learning. Today, it is a popular tourist destination and a place of pilgrimage.

5. Wat Lokaya Sutha

Wat Lokaya Sutha is a large temple located in the heart of Ayutthaya. Built in the 17th century, it was once a royal temple and a center of learning. Today, it is a popular tourist destination and a place of pilgrimage.

6. Wat Phanan Choeng

Wat Phanang Choeng is a small but beautiful temple located on the banks of the Chao Phraya River. Built in the 16th century, it was once a royal temple and a center of learning. Today, it is a popular tourist destination and a place of pilgrimage.

7. Wat Suwan Dararam

Wat Suwan Dararam is a large temple located in the heart of Ayutthaya. Built in the 15th century, it was once a royal temple and a center of learning. Today, it is a popular tourist
