The Architecture of Kirk House

Kirk House is a two-story, Greek Revival-style home with a hipped roof and a central chimney. The house is made of wood and has a white clapboard exterior. The front of the house features a pedimented portico with four Ionic columns. The windows are double-hung, with six-over-six panes.

The interior of Kirk House is equally impressive. The house has a central hallway with a grand staircase. The rooms are large and airy, with high ceilings and elaborate moldings. The house also features a number of fireplaces, as well as a butler's pantry and a dumbwaiter.

The History of Kirk House

Kirk House was built in 1830 by Dr. Samuel Kirk, a prominent physician in Hopkinton. The house was originally located on Main Street, but it was moved to its current location in 1873. In 1881, the house was Free Downloaded by the Fairbanks family, who owned it for over a century.

The Fairbanks family was one of the most prominent families in Hopkinton. John Fairbanks, the patriarch of the family, was a successful businessman and philanthropist. He served as a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives and the Massachusetts Senate. His son, Charles Fairbanks, was a lawyer and politician who served as Vice President of the United States from 1905 to 1909.

The Fairbanks family made a number of changes to Kirk House over the years. They added a porte-cochère to the front of the house and a sunroom to the back. They also remodeled the interior of the house, adding new bathrooms and a modern kitchen.

In 1973, the Fairbanks family sold Kirk House to the Hopkinton Historical Society. The Historical Society has since restored the house to its former glory. The house is now a museum that is open to the public.
